ALMA MATER

Westlake, thy daughters bring
Homage to thee,
As we thy praises sing
With voices free;
Our hearts' devotion strong
Shall e'er to thee belong.
We pledge our loyal love,
Westlake, to thee.

Spirit of White and Gold,
Bind us to thee;
Teach us thy gifts to hold,
Life's beauty see;
Our Alma Mater true
With faithful hearts anew
We pledge our loyal love,
Westlake, to thee.

MRS. MALCOLM DICKINSON

"The Senior Ring Pledge embodies our long-range goals for Westlake graduates. On the evening you received your rings you promised to seek the best gifts—of civilization, of man's achievements, of humanism, if you will—in a spirit of loyalty to your alma mater. Your ring is to be a constant reminder that you will center your thought and action in the best that we know of beauty and of truth: the golden part. Finally, your pledge of service to others may bring you the greatest happiness and self-fulfillment. Look at your ring often, and strive for constancy to these ideals."

MISS CAROL MILLS

"Years give a perspective. They put into place what is of little value, what is of true worth. Like Ruskin's books of the hour, books of all time, a school is tested as are its pupils by its intrinsic qualities. Westlake has met that test by its constant insistence upon fineness of character and achievement; and by its orientation through thoughtful change to the needs of a changing world. The years pronounce it good."

THE

MR. SYDNEY A. TEMPLE

"The aims of Westlake for the past fifty-nine years have been academic superiority and the shaping and development of character of girls into young women. With devoted and consecrated teachers, and students carefully selected to qualify for good Westlake citizenship, I have an abiding faith that the same ideal will be perpetuated for years to come. Education is the most important enterprise of our free society, and I deem it a privilege to be a part of the Westlake community."

COMMITTEE HEADS

This year the Student Council has concentrated on making each girl aware of the physical and intellectual world surrounding her. I hope that we have succeeded in our innovations and that every student has had some beneficial contact with the Council. I personally am very grateful for having had the opportunity to serve the student body. The Council has enjoyed working with you and has tried never to forget that its first duty is to you, the students. Finally, we trust that we have been more than a bridge between the faculty and students; we should like to have been an organization dedicated to preserving and furthering the respective rights of students and teachers.

WHITE TEAM

Dear Whites:

I can hardly thank you all enough for your help and enthusiasm during the past year. Serving as your captain has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my life. Win or lose, we were always on top in spirit, sportsmanship and loyalty. By your ability and eagerness to cooperate, you have made me proud to be a part of you. I feel we have achieved a unique togetherness which has led the way to better team-work and has made any work on my part completely worthwhile. I only hope that you have enjoyed being a White as much as I have enjoyed being your captain. Once again, thank you for everything.

SWIMMING

This year has been an exciting as well as a rewarding one for all of us with Gold-White swim meets, Wednesday afternoon practices and, of course, the Aquacade. I wish to thank Miss Perrine for her guidance and leadership, and all the girls who wholeheartedly gave me their support and spent many hours practicing. I have enjoyed being Swim Club president, and I shall always remember your friendship and cooperation. Thank you.

FREEDOM'S SONG

A skylark serenades the breeze
And flies from dawn to dawn;
A stream flows swiftly to the sea
And sings its gurgling song.
The wind moves in and out the clouds
And rustles through the leaves,
While sunbeams dance with daffodils
And play among the trees.
Oh, we can loose the strings of lyres
And quiet their sweet refrain,
And we can fether flesh with iron
Or glittering links of chain.
But who could cage the wild wind
And still the singing stream,
And who could kill the sunbeams' dance
Or clip the skylark's wings?

A DANCE

I danced on and on without pausing to breathe. I wheeled and whirled like a delicate leaf caught in a flood. The music seemed to lift my feet from the ground and drive me towards heaven. For the moment the spell of gravity had been broken and the jaws of endless space opened and swallowed me into a new medley of steps.

My spirit never ended. I danced faster as the pulse of the music quickened. My heart pounded against my ribs like a frantic fluttering bird struggling to be released from its cage. My lungs were ready to burst under the terrific pressure of my soul as it pushed its way through my body and out into a beautiful emotion.

My audience was enchanted by my grace and ease, watching me soar and fly, never missing a beat, never hesitating to think. My heart, wrapped in pure ecstasy, did the thinking for my brain. To the audience who sat in amazement, I was but a mirage: a wave that rolled up on the shore, left its mark and rolled back again. So overflowing with youth am I that my life is a dance.

From across the gallery you agree I am an harmonius blending of sight and sound. Come closer!

Now watch! Each light and dark, each height and depth emerges before your eyes as from the womb.

Though tissue tried to smother it, bitter metal must have its way and be seen in flashes. What could shield foil, however thin, from children's prying hands or the eyes of adults?

Listen to my song. It is ultra-violet. Find it where you lost it — in your heart.

Im Hashachar

Women drawing water from beautiful wells
Under a kindling sky, frighten a gazelle fawn
That has come to drink at the fountain's rim.
The sound of a flute rises and swells
Over golden hills. It is dawn.

Coming and going in the pure half-light,
Darkly veiled, they stream onto the plain,
The great jugs balanced lightly on their heads,
To dip them in water at the close of night,
And turn, to walk into the hills again.

THE TEACHINGS OF TIME

Newly born, oblivious to cruelties,
Children walk open-eyed into soot filled air;
And in ingenuous faith they stare up painfully
Unbelieving and forgiving.

With age they learn the common ways.
And wide clear eyes blink, and smart, and fear,
And unborn tears are trapped by closing eyes,
And can't escape.

Manhood comes violently and suddenly.
And little time is left for dropping tears;
So forever hidden feelings call in vain
And, unanswered, recede forever more.

Vivi Peter

The Spendthrifts

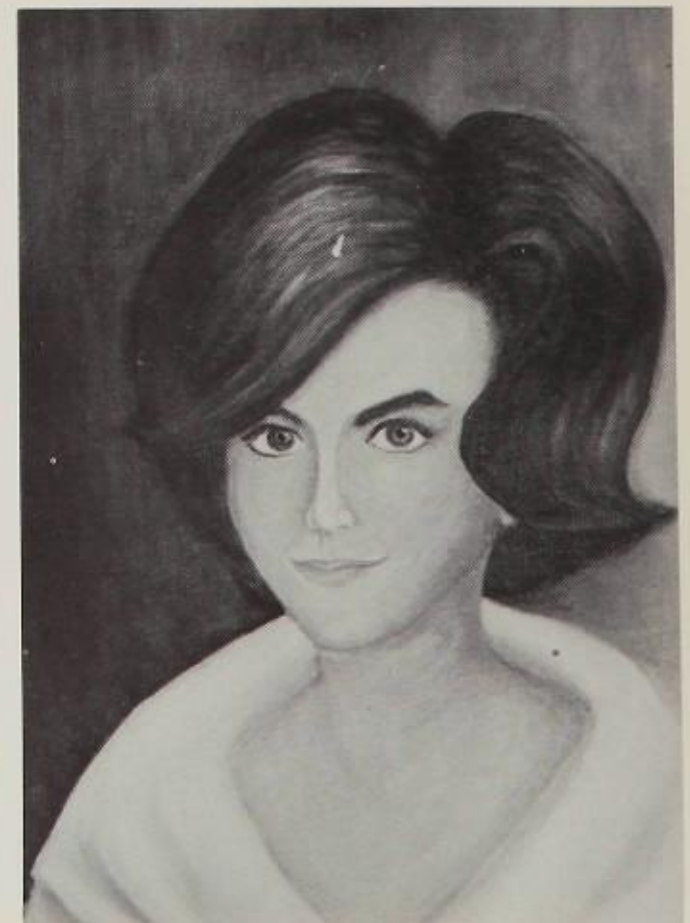

They call us spendthrifts, we who throw precious time away to be swept up by the passing winds and blown into eternity, we who interrupt our all-important work on a spring morning to watch the robin warble his greeting to a new life of warmth and plenty, we who squander valuable minutes in observing the antics of a crumb-carrying ant struggling over a littered desk top, we who delight in loosening the purse strings of our minds and letting our thoughts rush freely into the open where we may examine each as if it were a rare coin, we who temporarily erase the pressure of a material world and escape to the serene realm of God, yes, we who treasure these wasted moments as better spent than the hardest working day of our lives.

Mary Knight

ALL FOR NAUGHT

A man is dead and placed within the ground,
His bones to dust, his fate is in God's hands.
Upon him sun and rain unceasing pound.
He's free of life and life's unfair demands.
Death cares not how great a man or small,
How rich in fame or fortune when he breathed,
At judge's seat he sat or bricks did haul.
Life to Death this man she has bequeathed.
For Life is but a servant unto Death
Who serves her master in one single way
To offer hope, ambition, light, and breath,
Then gives to Death, who takes them all away.
For truly man is dust and so when spurned
By life, as dust to Death he is returned.

WHAT IS WISDOM?

It is seen on the old one's quiet face,
With wrinkles from study, toil, and pace.
Wisdom begins where knowledge ends.
Experience develops the life one spends.
Through love, forgiveness, envy and hate
Wisdom is that which we learn too late.

A TEAR

A tiny trickle of emotion
Or a great sob of pain.
Silent within
Or a rasping cry to humanity.
Hot and bitter
Or cool and remote.
An expression of sorrow
Or an expression of joy.
